Pam,

Thank you for your follow up email and connecting all of us on this issue. I was on leave in sunny Rhode Island and am just sorting through the stack on my desk.

The Tribe is prepared to fund the Cultural Resources Assessment, but we need to know the next appropriate step. We want this to happen ASAP, so I would appreciate input from both ACOE and FWS cultural resource leads.

Thank you.
Ralph

Ralph,

As we discussed today, based on available information the Corps believes the proposed work at Dungeness NWR has potential to cause effects to historic properties subject to protection under the National Historic Protection Act. The Corps has requested a cultural resource assessment to identify historic properties located in the project area.

There are currently discussions between US Fish and Wildlife Service and the Corps on whether either agency will act as federal lead. In any case, the Refuge manager, Jennifer, and I agree completing the cultural resource assessment should move forward as conducting surveys, if required, can be more difficult in the winter high tides.

I have copied this email to the Corps and FWS cultural resource leads and the Jamestown S'Klallam Tribe's archaeologist to facilitate their coordination.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

Pam
