I'm at an ODFW meeting all today and off tomorrow and Monday. We do have an uphill battle on this letter. I went over the strategy with Kevin this morning on what you suggested yesterday and he is willing to give it a try ... rework the letter a bit too and really get into how we can find a way that the RDT will go along with something that doesn't say yes. We do have to include some language on monitoring but, we can do so without coming across as it's a foregone conclusion. Kevin is planning on sending an email up the line to set the record straight on what our position is. This issue is the biggest one we have on your complex. Don't rush the letter, wordsmith like I know you can. This may be settled before I'm back on Tuesday. I think Kevin wants to get the next draft back up by tomorrow.

Don't rush the letter...but, have it done so Kevin can send a draft back up the chain tomorrow. I am putting this email in the same file with Robyn's directive to be clear, comprehensive and concise.

It would be easier to meet everyone's needs if we could use more than 1 page (actually 1/2 a page after header/address/etc). Mary added several lines with her edits which makes it difficult to include a reference to monitoring but ensure that it will not add to our disturbance concerns.

Since you are out, did you want us to send this straight to Kevin?

Here's our best shot...

PS: I think it should go without saying, but the literature attached is the best available science that we are aware of. If we new of more recent or more appropriate literature that could inform this discussion, we would have included it.
