Hi there Nicole,

Not sure if Jennifer has been in touch, so I've answered your questions as best as I can. Its such a complicated topic, that I sometimes get the fine points wrong, but at the least we will have something to go on. Ask me any wildlife question and I'm on it! But I'm a bit in the weeds on the management aspects of this issue. Jennifer is away on fire training and Lorenz, our Deputy, who may know more is out removing creosote-covered logs from a few other refuges, so I guess I'm it.

We do not actually own the land where the farm is located, but hold it under a Easement from WA Dept of Natural Resources. We manage for Refuge purpose (as a preserve and breeding ground for native birds). The three entities that manage 2 permits are Clallam County which issues a Shoreline Development permit and the Army Corp of Engineers as well as WA Dept of Ecology which jointly manage Aquaculture permits in the state. The ACOE and DOE permit is the most pressing now, Clallam Co has put theirs on hold until the more specific aquaculture permit is issued.

I hope that helps! Feel free to call if you have any additional questions and I'll do my best,
Sue

Hi Jennifer, thank you and Sue for the responses. I have a few more questions and I hopefully got all of them highlighted in yellow so it will be easier to find them in track changes. If they are too "in the weeds" or if they are information that everyone involved will already know, you can feel free to delete. I'm just reading this as a layperson and trying to figure out the relationship between the tribe seeking permits from one or all three other agencies, yet the farming is conducted in Refuge waters – I think? It seems like adding the specific agency, or all three if that permit request goes to all three, will help clarify a few details.

So, you can also look at what I did. There's so much solid information here, I just wanted to help it stand out a little to Robyn (or whomever) to get all your points.

I am more than happy to change or finalize this, or whatever helps. It's great to learn about things going on at refuges! I hope you are enjoying the east coast!

Thank you,
Nicole
